

Who is my first deceased ancestor?

Your first deceased ancestor is your closest ancestor who is no longer living. In the example below, it would be your grandpa on your father's side.

Why is that important?

Once you link to a deceased ancestor in your FamilySearch.org account, the website can help you connect to the generations that came before that ancestor.

